SCHOOLSHIP JOHN W. BROWN
Pier 73, East River and 25th Street

MR. WILLIAM T. HUDTWALKER, Principal

DEAR GRADUATES:

During your short stay at Metropolitan, we have tried to develop in you the attitudes required for good citizenship, the vocational skills which would make it easy for you to make a living, and the social and emotional habits necessary for a happy and successful life.

Very few of you should be disturbed by the discovery that education in its fullest sense is the pursuit of a lifetime and that graduation from high school is just a beginning. Your work at school and your experience in the years immediately ahead may be likened to the root formation of a great tree. The taller the tree, the stronger and deeper must be its roots. The root structure of a good life is formed by meeting its problems with courage, intelligence and realism.

Emotional poise, intellectual penetration and refined tastes are rarely the certain outcomes of an exposure to high school life. Emotional balance comes as the outgrowth of a positive outlook on life and a sincere desire to adjust and compromise in relations with other people; intellectual penetration comes from sustained study; refined tastes evolve from a conscious desire to discriminate in favor of true and lasting values.

Our President has said that America is great because America is good and that America will continue to be great as long as America continues to be good.

The faculty joins me in the sincere wish that you will always live wisely and well as part of that host of people of good will dedicated to keeping America good and great.

And now, as you leave us for new and greater responsibilities, we extend our blessings and bid you an affectionate farewell.

WILLIAM T. HUDTWALKER

NATHAN LULOFF,
Administrative Assistant

DEAR GRADUATES:

What does your diploma mean to you? Does it represent a record of achievement of which you may be proud? Does it reflect three or four years of earnest desire to learn? Is it an award for good character and good school citizenship? Does it represent your growth as a member of your community?

These are a few questions selected at random that an intelligent graduate should address to himself. His answers will to a considerable extent chart his way for further education, and thus, for further growth.

We know that among the members of your class there are many individuals who have been stimulated to learn more. They realize that there is still much for them to know. I trust that you will count yourself among those graduates. If so, you will attempt to answer the questions raised above. For an honest appraisal of one's achievement is truly the sign of a person who has profited from his education.

My best wishes to all of you.

NATHAN LULOFF

PERFORMING ARTS

STARDOM

Dear Graduates,

You have succeeded in our unique program which gives expression to the creative powers of selected individuals who have specialized talents that have cultural value for all of us. As a graduate you should consider these four years as a preparation period that has enabled you to think about future plans and to see more clearly how you may reach your goal. Under the guidance and direction of devoted teachers you have made excellent progress in this educational step which is really nothing more than a "whistle stop" in your advance to great ventures. You are well fortified with knowledge, skill, interest, ability and self-confidence to move forward. Probably three out of four will go immediately to college or continue with professional training. Others may find temporary employment or enter the armed forces before the completion of their educational careers. Occupational motives or an inward urge for personal satisfaction may spur you on to higher goals in education, business or a field of professional work.

You have cooperated wholeheartedly in all phases of a creative program that tends to preserve individuality within group activities. While all of us may differ in character traits and work traits we are expected to reach a certain level of accomplishment in any field of endeavor. In other words, what you do for yourself will be of great importance.

As a group you have demonstrated the interest and the performance skill that are necessary for success. As individuals you must continue to believe that there are limitless possibilities for individual development in all fields. It will be necessary for you to make full use of your inner powers to get personal happiness out of life while you are contributing something of value to society. In my conferences with you as individuals or groups, I have learned to know your attitudes, your problems and your learning patterns. I believe you are ready and willing to accept the challenges that await you.

DR. FRANK H. PAINE, Teacher-in-Charge

We shall remember you for your sincere efforts to do your best to master skills that may be indispensable in a world that has a different standard of values. As you extend your activities and widen your intellectual horizons, we hope you will use every opportunity to make this a better world by applying constructive ideas and ideals to existing conditions.

Performing Arts will always have a deep interest in you, in your problems and in your achievements. As long as you continue to combine recreation, study and performance to master a vocational skill or a phase of education, I am confident that you will reach your desired goal in life. No matter what you do, make it a habit to keep us informed and plan to visit us often.

Best wishes to all of you.
